Introduction

Tony Jarman, Bardon Commercials Workshop Manager explains just how CLEAN delivered a complete workwear and floorcare solution tailored to Bardon Commercials' needs. When Bardon Commercials opened its doors in Coalville, Leicestershire, it was a new venture with a clear vision: to keep commercial vehicles safely on the road, efficiently maintained and looking their best. The business was created as a joint venture between Revival Solutions Group and MTS Logistics Limited. Bardon Commercials provides expert servicing and maintenance for commercial vehicles and trailers across both fleets.

The Company

Tony manages a team of 8 engineers and takes great pride in delivering a professional, reliable service to his customers. Every detail of the business reflects this dedication; from the appearance of the workshop to the way technicians present themselves to potential customers. Tony admits that setting the business up correctly from the ground up is their secret to their success. Part of this process is to ensure that every team member is equipped with workwear that offered the right balance of comfort, durability and protection, meeting the required safety standards for the job.

A responsible employer

As a growing business, Bardon Commercials is committed to each team member being equipped with high quality, flame retardant and high visibility overalls that are safe, comfortable and ready for work in all conditions.

The challenge of finding a responsible supplier

Launching a new workshop came with the challenge of finding a reliable workwear partner. Tony needed a supplier who could deliver competitive prices as well as a seamless, dependable delivery and locker valet service. The garments had to be supplied, cleaned and returned quickly and accurately, with minimal administration and no delays. Having experienced CLEAN's outstanding service in previous roles, Tony already knew who to trust.

The solution CLEAN provided

Tony and his team decided that the Gryzko Multi-Protect Coverall Boilersuit would best suite their requirement. This two-tone coverall boilersuit offers protection against multiple risks including fire, welding splatter and electric ARC as well as hi-visibility and anti-static features. The new boilersuits ensured that every technician looked professional while staying protected on site. Each garment was assigned to an individual technician, branded with the Bardon Commercial logo and managed through a locker system to keep everything organised.

To complete the professional look, CLEAN also provided branded floor mats for the workshop and office areas, reinforcing the Bardon Commercial's identity from the moment visitors step through the door.

The installation and onboarding process

From the very first enquiry, CLEAN made the entire process effortless. The garments arrived perfectly fitted and branded, the lockers were installed with care, and collections and deliveries were scheduled to suit the workshop's operations. Tony described the experience as friendly, professional and completely hassle free, exactly what is needed when setting up a new site.

The result

Bardon Commercial now benefits from a smooth, reliable and fully managed service that keeps the workshop running efficiently and looking professional. Technicians always have clean, high quality overalls ready to wear, and the whole site projects the right impression for customers and partners alike.

Tony summed it up perfectly: "With CLEAN you get what it says on the tin. It is a five star service for me. They have been attentive, professional and very easy to deal with, and they have taken all the hard work off my hands."
